

PAPER HOUSES ACROSS THE BORDER

We learned many things about managing a nonprofit. Often, wonderful people will make a commitment and support a different charity each month or year. This means we must continue to search for new supporters to continue our work. New supporters are also needed to help new children, shelters, and begin new projects.

When you help by emailing and talking to friends, families, employers, coworkers, and schools about Paper Houses the impact is amazing. We've received invitations to speak at schools, businesses and church groups that resulted in donations and new mission trips. We've been interviewed by People Magazine and many media outlets because people wrote letters to the media.

You help to counter the divisive anger and hate that seems to permeate our culture when you help and encourage people to engage in charity.
